

Hay Market Demand and Price Report for the Upper Midwest
For August 24, 2020

Data Compiled by Richard Halopka Senior Outreach Specialist
Clark County Extension
Crops & Soils Agent

All hay prices quoted are dollars per ton FOB point of origin for alfalfa hay unless otherwise noted.

The information presented in this report is compiled from public and private quality tested sales and reports in the Midwest.

The past several months of hay reports are archived and you may view previous hay reports, go to <http://fyi.uwex.edu/forage/> on the Team Forage web site and click on the past hay reports section.

Hay auction data is collected on the first and third week of the month and posted by or before Tuesday. Prices quoted in this report are for “as fed” alfalfa hay.

Demand and Sales Comments

Dairy quality hay remains in demand and prices remain steady with some pressure to reduce prices. There was a greater supply of straw as much of the small grains have been harvested and farmers are moving excess straw to the market. If you need forage or have forage to sell, connect to the Farmer-to-Farmer webpage at <http://farmertofarmer.uwex.edu/>. You may contact your local county agriculture educator if you need help placing an ad. There is no charge for the service.

Straw prices are for oat, barley, or wheat straw. Straw is available at the market. Small square bales averaged $4.50 a bale (range of $3.00 to $6.00). Large square bale straw averaged $46.00 per bale (a range of $20.00 to $70.00). Large round bale straw averaged $47.00 per bale (a range of $24.00 - $65.00).

In Nebraska, all forages sold steady this week, demand was light to moderate with fewer phone contacts this week. In Iowa, prices on all types of hay were mostly steady.

In South Dakota, alfalfa hay was steady to firm with grass hay not really tested this week. Good demand for dairy quality hay with numerous out of state inquiries. Dry conditions are reducing third cutting yields.

In Missouri, hay prices remain steady, with a heavy supply, while demand is light. If dry conditions continue, there could be an increase in demand for hay.

In Southwest Minnesota, prices were steady with a limited supply of quality hay at the market. In Kansas, hay trade is slow, with light demand and steady prices. Humidity and spotty showers are delaying haymaking.

In Wisconsin, prices are steady for quality hay. Lower quality hay prices have backed off.

The next Hay Market Demand and Price Report for the Upper Midwest will be posted by Tuesday, September 15, 2020.
