My name is Dill Pickle and I'm 12 years old. This week I was outside mowing our lawn when I saw a bird nest in one of our plants. It had 4 baby birds, and one mom. The nest was 6 inches wide, and 4 inches long. I see that the mom made it out of small twigs and brush. They are all squished together, which I think probably makes them feel uncomfortable. The inside of their mouths is yellow like a banana. Their bodies look all the same. They are black with rough looking feathers. Their mom finds food like worms and brings it back for the babies to eat. The babies don't chirp yet, but when the mother saw me by them, she was chirping a lot. The nest felt prickly because of the twigs. It didn't smell like anything.

I also saw tulips in our flower garden. There are 50 tulips, which are all different colors of the rainbow. They are red, pink, purple, white, yellow, and orange. Also, I saw a lilac bush, which had purple flowers. The lilacs smelt amazing like lavender, which is one of my favorite smells.
